Dr. Ludy Green will cover wellness strategy and science for Thriveglobal

Washington, D.C., Dec. 7, 2016 — Human-rights activist Dr. Ludy Green will serve as an expert contributor to the new health and wellbeing initiative of Arianna Huffington, Founder of the Huffington Post.

The online Thrive Global platform was launched Nov. 30 in New York City. It's a leading online hub of expert advice, information and science to help people live better and happier lives. Leaders in academia, science and medicine contribute rigorous, data-based columns on diverse wellness topics.

Writers will draw compelling, empirical connections among wellbeing, productivity and healthier lives — the science of better living.

Dr. Green is an internationally known activist, policymaker and lecturer on domestic abuse of women and human trafficking. She authored the landmark book, Ending Domestic Violence Captivity: A Guide to Economic Freedom.

Dr. Green has helped thousands of women escape domestic abuse. Meaningful career-track jobs provide women freedom from abuse that can turn deadly, Green says. She provides women career skills needed to escape the tragic cycle of abuse.

Green regularly writes for the Huffington Post on wellness topics such as healing your workspace, economic empowerment, branding yourself, and caring for yourself while caring for others.

These are the same support skills Green uses in helping women victims of domestic violence, abused children and human-trafficking victims.

Dr. Green is President and Founder of Second Chance Employment Services, the first and only employment and skills agency in the U.S. for victims of violence.

She has advised the White House and Congress on domestic abuse, strengthened the seminal federal domestic-abuse law, and served as a U.S. representative to numerous nations on abuse and trafficking.
